KIDDing!

Over and over, the Bible tells us about the importance kids have in the Kingdom of Heaven. While kids aren't often the protagonists of the stories in the Bible, they are often the central pieces and vital to the narrative. The Bible contains some awesome kids who were essential to the story, including an 8-year-old king (Josiah) who was thrust into kingship and responsibility, a boy who brought his lunch to the disciples when they had over 5,000 people to feed, an infant who Jesus placed in the middle of his disciples and called the greatest in his Kingdom, other infants whom Jesus welcomed and stood up for, a 12-year-old boy (Jesus) in the temple who taught the religious leaders, A boy (Samuel) who was called by God and responded by calling himself a servant of the Lord, a girl who remembered the power of God even when she was a slave in another land and was able to witness to her master (Naaman), and young girl who was sick and died but had people around her willing to fight for her and find Jesus to heal her. All of these stories (and more) teach us how essential kids are in the Bible and the story of God's people. As we read through the Scriptures, we find one thing is certain - kids are of utmost important to the story of redemption that is continuing to unfold before us!
